Call for Papers: Submission for Prospect Quarterly

Prospect Quarterly (遠景基金會季刊) is an academic journal published every January, April, July, and November. Prospect Quarterly focuses primarily on the following areas: China studies, Asia-Pacific issues, cross-Strait relations, and regional security. We accept manuscripts in either Chinese (traditional characters) or English. Manuscripts in Chinese should be between 10,000 – 20,000 characters, and manuscripts in English between 8,000 – 10,000 words. Prospect Quarterly accepts manuscripts on political economy at the macro-level, but does not accept those on mathematical economics.

Prospect Quarterly will not consider manuscripts that are submitted to any other journal at the same time, or those that have already been published. Submitted manuscripts should follow the format and style used by Prospect Quarterly. Prospect Quarterly has the right to request the author(s) to revise the format and style, and to decline publication if the manuscript does not meet the relevant requirements.

All manuscripts will go through a double-blind peer review process by domestic or international scholars. Therefore, manuscripts should not include any information about the identity of the author(s). The editors also reserve the right to make editorial revisions before publication. When a manuscript is published, Prospect Quarterly will send five hard copies of the corresponding issue to the author(s).

After a manuscript is accepted and before publication in hard copy and digital versions, each and every author is required to sign a approval form of the copyright of the published article being transferred to the Prospect Foundation. Published articles are fully subject to copyright protection; the original content of the published article can only be used with permission by the Prospect Foundation. However, the author can still use the material therein for non-profit use, such as teaching or research purposes.

Once the manuscript is received, it will be promptly processed for review. Manuscripts must be submitted via e-mail at: pq@pf.org.tw; once the editors receive the submission, confirmation of reception will be sent within one week.
